PUBLISHER'S NOTE

The beautiful simplicity of the religious figures, the intricate knot patterns typical of the Celts, the snakes which, as legend has it, were cast out of Ireland by St. Patrick, have all found their way into these charming renderings by Courtney Davis. These sixteen examples of traditional Celtic designs, printed on translucent paper, may be removed, colored and mounted in your windows, providing a glimpse of a rich and rare culture, appreciated and treasured through the centuries.

These pictures can be colored with crayon, felt-tip pen, acrylics, watercolors, tempera, or even oil paint. You will get interesting results if you mix these coloring techniques. You can color one side or both; using different colors on the two sides will produce rich combinations. If you color one side only, place the sheet on your window with the colored side facing outdoors to produce a crisper black outline.
